only a small part in the strategy of Grand Duke Nicholas. Military authorities hold that a fortnight must elapse before there is a definite decision regarding the fate of Warsaw in the gigantic battle raging on this front.

"No great importance is attached to the success of the small detachments of German tanks which are fighting their way into the city," says Narew. Before they become a real menace to Warsaw they must first have to wade through miles of woody and marshy country.

"The Germans are advancing the Germans find the country devastated by the Russians when they have taken possession of Moscow. Already they are beginning to feel the pinch. Col. Schumsky believes it fully probable they will repeat this."
